Sons of Immigrants and America's World Cup Dream

JUNE 14, 2026 AFRICAN METRO NEWS

Friday 12 June 2026 was a good night in America.
As the crowd rose inside the SOFi stadium in Los Angeles and the United States pushed forward against Paraguay in its opening match of the 2026 FIFA World Cup, Folarin Balogun found space where none appeared to exist. One goal followed another. By the final whistle, the son of Nigerian immigrants had scored twice, helping propel the United States to a commanding victory and announcing himself to a global audience.
For many American soccer fans, the 4-1 victory was a breakthrough performance. For many immigrants watching from living rooms in Houston, Dayton, Minneapolis, Atlanta, Broklyn and Toronto, that win felt like something more familiar: another chapter in a story they already knew.

The story begins far from the stadium. It begins with parents who crossed oceans carrying ambitions larger than themselves. It begins with families who arrived in America seeking opportunity and whose children would grow up navigating multiple identities at once American at school, Nigerian, Mexicans, Ghanaian, Jamaican, British, Salvadoran, or Haitian at home.
Balogun's journey captures that reality. Eligible to represent Nigeria, England, or the United States, he ultimately chose America. His goals against Paraguay were celebrated in U.S. jerseys, but they were also celebrated in immigrant households that recognized something of themselves in Balogun's story.

To be sure, For the 2026 FIFA World Cup, the U.S. men's national team (USMNT) roster includes six players born outside the United States, and several of them, including FolarinBalogun and Timothy Weah, two players, born in Brooklyn New York, are the children of immigrants

Players born abroad and with immigrant roots include Sebastian Berhalter – Born in London, UK;.Sergiño Dest – Born in Almere, Netherlands; Gio Reyna – Born in Sunderland, Antonee Robinson – Born in Milton Keynes, UK; Malik Tillman – Born in Nuremberg, Germany; and Alejandro Zendejas – Born in Ciudad Juárez, Mexico

The modern American soccer team increasingly resembles modern America itself—a collection of players whose roots stretch across continents. The diversity is not incidental. It is foundational. Soccer has long flourished in immigrant communities, where the game requires little more than a ball, a patch of grass, and imagination.

That reality creates one of the more striking contradictions in contemporary American life.

At a moment when immigration remains one of the nation's most divisive political issues, many of the athletes carrying the country's hopes on the world's biggest sporting stage are the children of immigrants. Their parents arrived from elsewhere, but their children now wear the crest of the United States and stand for the national anthem before millions.

The World Cup has always been about nations. Yet it is also about migration, movement, and identity. Every roster tells a story of people crossing borders, building new lives, and creating new definitions of belonging.

For many immigrants, USA's performance carried a particular resonance that energized World Cup audiences. It was present in the crowds.; it was present on the field itself, embodied by players whose family journey began elsewhere and whose goals now belong to America. They represented the complicated, evolving story of America itself—a nation still debating immigration while being continually renewed by it. In that sense, Balogun's two goals and USA's victory Friday night, represented more than a victory over Paraguay.

Yeah, Friday 12 June 2026 was a good night in America!

VOY Commentary

In a related conjecture, Author Deji Badiru, in his 2010 book on The Physics of Soccer, celebrating World Cup 2010, wrote that playing soccer is not just about kicking a ball around and scoring goals, but it also involves managing and appreciating people from all walks of life, backgrounds, and immigrant pathways. World Cup 2026 aptly confirms this unifying notion. By the way, below is another view of the spread of "Nigerian Roots" in FIFA World Cup 2026.

It is not only in sports that Americans with Nigerian roots are making huge contributions around the world. See the headlines below:

Damola Adamolekun is a 37-year-old Nigerian-American who became the youngest CEO of Red Lobster restaurant in 2024. He was previously the first Black CEO of P. F. Chang's restaurant. He has been leading Red Lobster through its post-bankruptcy turnaround.

Damola's strategy is to make Red Lobster the most AI-forward-looking restaurant. He is integrating AI into the restaurant's operations, reporting, and decision-making. AI-generated restaurant performance systems now help executives evaluate Red Lobster locations more efficiently. This is at a time when many businesses and observers are expressing fears that AI would take jobs from humans.

Translated to our favorite language: Dem no dey stand one place look masquerade.
Translated into what we can all relate to: To enjoy the dance of the masquerade, you must move around.
Yes, indeed, Nigerians do move around. That's why they are enjoying professional advancements around the world. Kudos for creative explorations. Clap, Clap.

Prepared statement of Professor Adedeji Badiru, Chairman, Board of Trustees, InnoPower Africa, Friday, March 23, 2026

I am delighted to welcome everyone to this inaugural event of InnoPower Africa's Founders Showcase.

I appreciate the collaborative gesture of CEO Emil Ekiyor of InnoPower Global for inviting me to play this visible role as the Chairman of the Board of Trustees of InnoPower Africa. This perfectly aligns with my own ideals of how to improve the world, one person at a time. The future of our society rests in the hands of young entrepreneurs of today. I thank Emil for realizing this and committing himself and his personal resources to this special program.

I have personally and directly witnessed what Emil has done and continues to do constructively in the State of Indiana, USA and elsewhere. I am delighted that he is proactively extending InnoPower's reach to Africa. The problems of Africa are best addressed within Africa. That is only possible if we enable and empower young people to take control of the future by starting and running their own innovative businesses. This is what InnoPower Africa is all about.

This is a program that is designed to inspire, encourage, mentor, and support young African Entrepreneurs with INNOvative business ideas.

Today, you will hear from 8 exceptional presenters who are pitching their various ideas to an attentive panel of business experts. The constructive critique from the experts will help the presenters to

- Refine their business ideas,
- Practice articulating and presenting their ideas,
- Benefit from the strategic feedback from the experienced experts,
- And network with mentors, partners, and potential investors.

We are all beneficiaries of InnoPower Africa because if our society gets better, we are all better off, due to the interconnectedness of systems thinking and implementation. Thank you.

We still love this photo from the March newsletter. It looks impressive, majestic, and inspirational.

Anonymous Farmer's Helpers

A man has been sentenced to 7 years in prison for stealing millions.

Two years after the start of his sentence, he received a letter from his father:

"My dear son, you left me old and sick. It's planting season and I have no one to help me plow the field and sow the corn. I wish so much that you were here. God willing, we will meet again."

The son replied:

"Dear father, please don't dig the field yet. That's where I buried all the money I stole. Wait for my release."

Since all the prisoners' letters are read by the guards, the next morning more than 100 prison officers showed up at the father's farm and turned it upside down, but they found nothing.

The son then wrote to his father:

"Dear Dad, I hope you appreciated the help I gave you. You can now go and plant your corn."

==========

The Voice of Yoruba (VOY) has been published quarterly and consistently for over 15 years. We are now in the 16th Volume of the popular medium of informing and entertaining readers. Over the years, the editorial platform has been tweaked, here and there, to impact more readability and engagement for the benefit of all readers. In the early days, VOY was published in a printed hardcopy format on glossy paper. It was circulated then via in-person handouts. Later, it transitioned to an email distribution as a PDF attachment. That quickly became archaic as many readers did not have adequate email facilities to accommodate large email attachments. We then went to a distribution via downloads from the VOY website: www.voiceofyoruba.org. That has worked well and will continue to work. The emergence and prevalence of WhatsApp further enhanced VOY's distribution platform. The newsletter is now widely distributed and shared through WhatsApp social media groups. Future enhancements are envisioned, as new modes of communication evolve in response to new and emerging IT technologies.

In preparation for the eventual future transitioning of VOY, we are instituting an experimental process of bringing on board guest editorial teams, who are expected to approach the production and distribution of the newsletter from new, different, and exciting perspectives.

In this regard, we are excited to invite Guest Editors for the production of the December 2025 issue of the VOY newsletter.

Recommendations and Volunteers are welcome.

Traditionally, the target release date of each issue of VOY is at the end of each quarter, before things creep too far into the next quarter. The guest editors, now or in the future, will ensure that the established pattern of newsletter release will be upheld.

To aid this transition plan, a written guide has been prepared for distribution to those interested in serving as VOY editors now or in the future.

You will enjoy the joy of writing for fun.

Dear readers. . . .

If we don't get volunteers soon, we may have to call AI to step in.
